DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Cornish House has a symmetrical facade. An elaborate cupola is directly above the entrance of the three-story brick structure. Windows on the first two levels are tall, arched, and have white circular labels. The third level has a mansard roof and dormer windows. The mansard roof is asphalt-tiled and the roof-ribs are defined by white trimmings. Wood trims on the front veranda carry on the shape of the arched labels. The south porch, however, has gingerbread trimming of the Eastlake style.

There are a total of fifteen rooms in the house. The ceiling on the first floor is thirteen feet high. Floors are bordered with parquet woodwork. There are four fireplaces, one of pink marble being especially obtained for the house. The Cornish family occupied the house until 1911, after which the house was converted into apartments and the interior extensively remodeled. A three-story addition was built on the west over the years. No effort was made, however, to carry over the same architectural style of the mansion. The property is now owned by the Grace Bible Institute and rented out to students. The building is in good physical condition.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Cornish family may be traced back to Cornwall, England. In 1692 Samuel Cornish came to Plymouth Massachusetts, and married Susannah Clark, granddaughter of Thoams Clark, mate of the Mayflower. Joel N. Cornish was born May 28, 1828. He graduated at the State Normal School at Albany and studied law at Utica and Rome, New York, in the office of Roscoe Conkling. He was admitted to the bar and began practice at Iowa City, Iowa, in 1855. In 1859 he settled at Sidney, Iowa, and soon established a reputation as a successful lawyer. In 1862 he was appointed draft commissioner for his congressional district, with the rank of lieutenant colonel of calvary. Later he was commissioned by Abraham Lincoln as colonel of Iowa cavalry. In 1877 he organized the First National Bank of Hamburg, Iowa.

Colonel Cornish moved to Omaha in 1886 and became president of the National Bank of Commerce and became associated with other business enterprises as well. He was self-reliant, independent in thought and character, and successful in his undertakings. Colonel Cornish married Miss Virginia Raymond, of Cuba, New York. Their children were Ada, who married Mr. J. H. Hertsche; Anna, who married Mr. J. M. Metcalf, of Lininger & Metcalf Company, Omaha; Albert J., of Lincoln, Nebraska; and Edward J., of Omaha. Joel N. Cornish died June 7, 1908.

The Cornish house was built in a period when Omaha was witnessing an influx of cultured Eastern families, who brought with them wealth, professional skills, and business acumen. Homes in this period were compact and solidly constructed. They were often designed by Eastern architects who transplanted literally design forms of European origins but used exterior detailing of somewhat more elaborate millwork. The Cornish House displays an almost pure French Second Empire style. The front veranda was the first manifestation of American taste in residential architecture. There is a lack of classical detail from the chimney, as differed from the French tradition.

Few American cities are without houses in the Second Empire style, which got a hold in domestic architecture in the mid 1850's. Most are Americanized in a sense similar to the Cornish House. Many, as a consequence of the architect's deference to practical requirements or to a taste for the picturesque (or both), are asymmetric in their massing.
