Description

The Joseph Garneau, Jr. residence, 3100 Chicago Street, reveals through a minimal number of elements the medieval and picturesque qualities of the Romanesque Revival style of architecture. Constructed in 1890, the building represents a unique local application of this Victorian style to a single-family unit. Joseph Garneau, Jr., vice-president and general manager of the Joseph Garneau Cracker Company, erected the structure on the southeast corner of the Touzalin and Yates Reserve after the American Biscuit and Manufacturing Company assured ownership of the local factory.

Of bearing wall construction, the red-brick and sandstone three-story residence is asymmetrical in massing and irregular in plan. The round arched main entrance, surrounded by rusticated sandstone voussoirs and quoin, is flanked by a projecting polygonal tower on the west and a steeply pitched gabled dormer on the east. Coupled, semi-circular arched windows in groups of two and threes are located directly above this entrance and within the structure's end gables. All other window openings employ straight-topped sandstone lintels and rusticated sills which extend to form decorative horizontal belt courses. An unornamented single-story porch and a two-story bay window provide additional relief to the building's east facade.

The residence's original smooth brick exterior finish has been textured with a rose-colored stucco and a second story, wood frame sun porch has been added to the rear elevation. All roof surfaces remain sheathed in gray slate shingles and ridges are covered with decorative crown tile.

Extensive interior remodeling has produced nine efficiency apartments which retain only woodwork and fireplace elements. The structure's original entry and grand staircase have been retained to provide access to these units and provide the major focal point of the interior.

A one and one-half story carriage house, similar in detail to the main structure, occupies the northeast corner of the estate. Its three gabled dormers, inset with single round-arched windows, act to reinforce the picturesque silhouette of the residence.
Statement of Significance

Joseph Garneau, Jr., vice-president, treasurer and general manager of the Joseph Garneau Cracker Company, established residency in Omaha during 1883 when the St. Louis based company opened a branch factory at Twelfth & Jackson Streets. Producing ninety varieties of crackers and cakes which were distributed in twenty states and territories, the Garneau Cracker Company became one of the largest operations of its kind in the West during the 1880's. Garneau's successful development of the Omaha operation led to its consolidation in 1890 with the American Biscuit and Manufacturing Company of Chicago. Later that year, Joseph Garneau, Jr. erected a Romanesque style, brick and sandstone residence at 3100 Chicago Street. An accomplished horseman, Garneau served as president of the Omaha Driving Park Association until 1896 when he was transferred by the parent company to Chicago.

In 1903, Thomas Kilpatrick obtained ownership of Garneau's Chicago Street home and resided there until his death in January, 1916. The structure represents the only extant place of residence for Kilpatrick, a prominent Omaha merchant.

Kilpatrick, born in 1841 near Glasgow, Scotland, was employed by A. T. Stewart of New York and Hogg, Brown & Taylor of Boston before going into business for himself under the name of Taylor, Kilpatrick & Company, Retail Dry Goods, Cleveland. In 1887, Kilpatrick bought out the wholesale dry goods house of Tottie, Macul and Company of Omaha and formed the Kilpatrick-Koch Dry Goods Company. By 1895, the retail house of N. B. Falconer and the jobbing house of the J. T. Robinson Notion Company were purchased by Kilpatrick and associates, adding the manufacture of clothing to their former business.

After this series of expansions, the business became known as Thomas Kilpatrick & Company and occupied the former Ross and Cruickshank Store on the northeast corner of Fourteenth & Farnam Streets. The company continued to expand during the twentieth century and erected a six-story building in 1923, another six-story unit in 1926 and in 1934 acquired the Browning-King business. In 1946, Kilpatrick bought the World-Herald Building at Fifteenth & Farnam Streets for additional office space. The company, acquired in 1961 by Younker Brothers, Inc. of Des Moines, continues to operate a number of shopping center locations under the title of Younker-Kilpatrick's.
